Упр. 2, с. 93

The first flying machines were kites. The Chinese made them about 1500 years ago. They were usually triangle-shaped.

Then, there was the hot-air balloon. A fire under the balloon made the air hot. In November 1783 two men flew a hot-air balloon in France for about 8 km.

But people wanted to fly like a bird so they made gliders – flying machines with very big wings. In the 1890s they flew about 100 or 150 metres.

People wanted to fly a longer way so in 1902 in America the Wright brothers made a biplane. It had two long wings. One wing was at the top and one was under it. And a year later, they made a biplane with an engine – the Wright Flyer. Biplanes with engines flew a long way but people needed bigger planes.

This happened in the 1950s. The British, Russians and Americans made planes for many people. They had big engines in or under the wings and they flew a very long way.
